SINGLE VINEYARD WINES OF COLCHAGUA VALLEY

Maquis vineyards are located literally on an island, surrounded by the Tinguiririca and Chimbarongo rivers, ancient waterways that once carried alluvial sediments from the Andes Mountains into present day Colchagua Valley. Today they act as pathways for cool coastal breezes that help moderate the warm Colchagua summers, a combination which makes wine from this region appealingly fruity with excellent structure and length. Chief winemaker and owner Ricardo Rivadeneira Hurtado and viticulturist Xavier Choné along with winemaker Rodrigo Romero make wines that reflect the extraordinary character of this unique soil and topography.
