Introducing Marichal, one of the finest producers of Tannat in Uruguay

Bordering Brazil and Argentina, the country of Uruguay is home to many small wineries that were first planted by Basque and Italian immigrants as far back as the 1870s. The climate and soil are ideal components for bringing new life to old grape varieties such as Tannat.

Marichal is headed by winemakers Juan Andrés and Alejandro Marichal. They are a family-owned winery originally established in 1938 and they are now into their third and fourth generation of family winemaking. The vineyards are located at an ideal latitude in the department, or province, of Canelones (15 miles north of Uruguay's capitol, Montevideo) where the warm weather, cool Atlantic breezes and deep clay soil allow varieties like Tannat thrive and achieve unique character.

International Wine Review on Marichal wines—

92 points: Marichal Tannat Grand Reserve "A" 2013

"40 year old, single vineyard (one of the first French Tannat clones planted in Uruguay): rich & ripe, complex nose of primary fruit, chocolate, rosemary and mint. Silky smooth and dense—dark cherry, plum, dried fruit, hints of chocolate, chalky tannins, and a prolonged finish."

90 points: Marichal Pinot Noit/Tannat Rsv Collection 2013

"Darker and more intensely flavored than the straight Pinot Noir. Cherry, red berries and pomegranate are complemented by light earth and herbal notes. Very flavorful with good depth and length."

91 points: Marichal Tannat Reserve Collection 2013

"The nose shows huckleberry fruit with hints of rosemary and bay leaf, soft on the attack and suave on the palate with layers of dark fruit with tobacco and herbal notes, finishing long and smooth. 70 percent of the wine is aged in barrel for 12 months, 30% new. French (40%) and American (60%) oak."

90 points: Marichal Premium Varietal Tannat 2014

"made from a mix of clones. It goes through a 3 day cold soak and a very short maceration. It offers fresh dark cherry and plum with a hint of tobacco leaf. It has soft tannins and rich flavors. Very well made."
