

CASABLANCA VALLEY
Cool Climate Specialists from Chile

Columbine Special Reserve

William Cole Vineyards lies deep within Chile's prestigious Casablanca Valley—often called “Chile's Burgundy.” This cool climate vineyard near the coast, which is comprised of over 129 contiguous hectares, provides a long, warm growing season with cool nights to develop excellent acidity. Owned by Bill Cole and his Chilean family, the winery specializes in cool climate varieties, and the wines are crisp, clean and complex. The winery makes three reserve wines, called Columbine Reserve, representing the vineyard's finest wines.

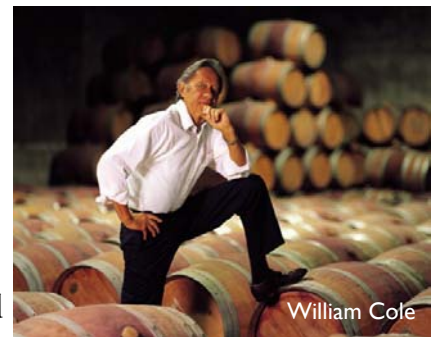

These bottlings are made from a single vineyard from hand-picked grapes.

William Cole Columbine Reserve Sauvignon Blanc 2013

Displays a nose of citrus and tropical fruit followed by notes of peach and white flowers on the palate. The full character of the cool Casablanca appellation is demonstrated by the balance of freshness, flavor and acidity.

William Cole Columbine Reserve Pinot Noir 2013

All the Pinot Noir fruit comes from carefully tended vines owned by the William Cole family in the cool Casablanca Valley. Aged for six months in small oak casks, the wine retains all of its attractive fresh fruit character, combined with silky tannins and a long, complex finish. Perfect for lighter meals and tomato-based sauces.

William Cole Columbine Reserve Cabernet Sauvignon 2012

A wine of balance, finesse and ageability. On the nose, it has blackberry and coffee aromas. On the palate, it's full-bodied with black cherries and outstanding length. Aged 12 months in
