

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

Dry Riesling

This aromatic white grape usually associated with Germany is highly expressive of the Chilean terroir in which it's grown. Meli's version is unoaked and has no residual sugar, which showcases the grape's brisk acidity. International Wine Review calls it "fresh, crisp, and a good value." Only 500 cases produced.

