Gran Reserva Carménère

VINEYARD

The vineyard is located in Marchigüe 25 km from the Pacific Ocean in the gentle hills of the coastal mountains where the soft breezes coming from the ocean moderate temperatures and allow to obtain an excellent concentration and especially very fresh and aromatic fruit. The soils are granitic with an important content of clays that positively influence the concentration in the mouth and the development of persistent aromas in the wine.

The blocks selected for this Carmenera are planted in the lower sectors, on predominantly granitic and mineral soils, low in organic matter, which gives more concentrated grapes with a good structure and texture on the palate.

2020 CLIMATE

The season was marked by a dry and warm climate that challenged us to be more alert than ever in identifying the right moment for the harvest of each block in order to maintain the elegance and natural balance that have characterized our wines in this terroir.

The wines of this vintage are marked by an excellent intensity of color, high concentration, showing a very high quality that will be reflected in an excellent complexity and very good ageing.

REVIEWS

"From vineyards planted on gentle slopes in the Marchigüe zone in western Colchagua Valley, and where there is a slight influence of sea breezes, this carmenere shows a lush and succulent side of the variety, especially since it was a warm year in the valley. The texture is very smooth, and there's a bit of room for the expression of herbal notes, which are in the variety's DNA." Patricio Tapia, December 2022.

"Deep and bright red color with violet notes. Intense –aromas of cassis fruits and black olives and a background of roasted bell pepper. Very juicy, with soft tannins and a good structure. A well balanced wine with a great tipicity." Rodrigo Romero, Winemaker.
